Continuing drought leads to fire safety concerns during fall harvest

As drought conditions continue across Iowa, the fall harvest brings fire safety concerns.

The Iowa Department of Public Safety State Fire Marshal Office is reminding agricultural producers of the possible danger of fire during harvest. In their "Fall Agricultural Fire Safety Bulletin" the Office of the State Fire Marshal recommends the following safety measures be taken during harvest:

- Have a charged fire extinguisher
- Maintain equipment in good working condition
- Remove chaff and residue from equipment
- Keep debris away from buildings

- Be aware of fire spread in extreme wind conditions
- Be careful with low vehicles driving in fields

September is Family Preparedness Month Have you pledged to prepare?

September is Family Preparedness Month in Iowa. HSEMD, the Safeguard Iowa Partnership (SIP) and the Iowa Emergency Management Association (IEMA) are encouraging all Iowans to take a pledge to be better prepared for emergencies and disasters.

"We encourage Iowans to 'Pledge to Prepare,' during Family Preparedness Month," said HSEMD Administrator Mark Schouten. "Pledging can be as easy as setting up weather alerts on your mobile phone or vowing to pick up a few items each week at the grocery store to stock your emergency supply kit."

HSEMD, SIP and IEMA are asking Iowans to Pledge to Prepare by taking just one simple step to be more prepared for emergencies. The pledge can be found at www.beready.iowa.gov.

- Be aware of your surroundings when using acetylene torches and welders

In addition to these safety measures, the State Fire Marshal Office urges agricultural producers to watch for red flag warnings. Red flag warnings mean a combination of strong winds, low humidity and warm temperatures will create explosive fire growth potential.

Currently, nearly all of the state is rated as in severe or extreme drought, with a small section in the northwest corner rated as exceptional drought. Many counties in Iowa remain under open burning bans. A map of Iowa counties under open burning bans can be found at www.dps.state.ia.us/fm/main/burnbans/index.shtml.
